“Oh Yeah” hitmaker King Promise has shot down claims by veteran highlife musician Rex Omar that the current groups of musicians are poor.

We reported some weeks ago, of Rex Omar saying that current artistes are poor but they live a lie in order to look rich in the eyes of their fans and the public.

Speaking to the host of ‘Entertainment Xtra’, Emcee Bebe on Cape 93.3 FM, King Promise described the assertion of Rex Omar as vague and he doesn't know how he arrived at that percentage (90%) citing his financial state as a case study.

“I don’t know where Rex Omar got that statistical information from but personally I’m not broke and I believe same thing applies to my colleagues. I’ve a first degree, doing music and making enough money from it as well. So how...?”, he quizzed

King Promise who’s signed under Legacy Life Entertainment is currently promoting his new song dubbed “CCTV ” which he featured Sarkodie and Mugeez.
